JUSTICE DEPT.: ISLAMIC STATE-LINKED CASES IN US NUMBER 110 SINCE 2013

I U.S. Assistant Attorney General John Carlin said Monday more than 110 people have been publicly charged in federal court since late 2013 on counts related to the Islamic State militant group that has overrun much of Syria and Iraq. Carlin said the Justice Department needs the American public to be more proactive about alerting federal authorities when they witness someone showing support for foreign terrorist organizations, such as Islamic State, in remarks to reporters at the Justice Department. In more than 80 percent of the Islamic State cases that have been prosecuted since 2013, someone in the community of the accused person believed they had witnessed the activity for which the person was ultimately charged, according to Carlin. In more than half of those cases, the witnesses did not report anything. REUTERS

MOSQUE WHERE FLORIDA NIGHTCLUB SHOOTER WORSHIPPED SET ON FIRE

2 The Florida mosque where Omar Mateen, who committed the deadliest mass shooting in U.S. history, prayed was damaged Monday in an arson attack, investigators said. Mateen was killed by law enforcement officials after fatally shooting 49 people and wounding 53 others in a gay nightclub in Orlando in June. Local law-enforcement officers received reports of flames rising from the Islamic Center of Fort Pierce, located about 100 miles southeast of Orlando, at about 12:30 a.m., St. Lucie County Sheriff's Major David Thompson told reporters at a news conference. No one was injured. The attack occurred on Eid ul-Adha, one of the holiest Muslim holidays. "Immediately after the individual approached, a flash occurred and the individual fled the area," Thompson said. REUTERS

FACEBOOK SAYS IT WILL LEARN FROM MISTAKE OVER VIETNAM PHOTO

3 Facebook will learn from a mistake it made by deleting a historic Vietnam War photo of a naked girl fleeing a napalm attack, the company's chief operating officer said. The photograph was removed from several accounts Friday, including that of Norwegian Prime Minister Erna Solberg, on the grounds it violated Facebook's restrictions on nudity. It was reinstated after Solberg accused Facebook of censorship and of editing history. "These are difficult decisions and we don't always get it right," Facebook Chief Operating Officer Sheryl Sandberg wrote in a letter to the prime minister, obtained by Reuters on Monday under Norway's freedom of information rules. REUTERS

Democrats cough it up: Schumer says he had pneumonia as well

Politicians with pneumonia is going viral.

AMANDA MIKELBERG
@MetroNewYork
amanda.mikelberg@metro.us

Pneumonia-stricken Hillary Clinton isn't the only one clearing her throat. U.S. Sen. Chuck Schumer stated Monday that he too was recently diagnosed with the infection.

One day following the Democratic nominee's surprising medical revelation, Schumer, 65, told the Associated Press that he had the same diagnosis a few weeks ago.

He said he was put on antibiotics, took up a lighter schedule to recover and is now doing just fine. A statement from Schumer's office said that his doctor "has pronounced him all cleared up and he's feeling much better."

Schumer was standing next to Clinton during the 9/11 memorial service on Sunday morning when she had to make an emergency exit, feeling "overheated" and on the verge of fainting. Hours later her campaign revealed she had pneumonia, diagnosed two days earlier.

Schumer had said that

Clinton "seemed fine to me" before she made her exit.

What happened immediately following Clinton's exit is now uncertain as the New York Post reported Monday that Clinton was heading to the ER, but that her team advised her not to go in order to keep her medical condition concealed.

Citing anonymous sources, the Post reported that Clinton was en route to a state-designated Level 1 trauma center but that an aide advised a detour to her daughter Chelsea's downtown apartment where she would have more privacy.

Despite not going to the hospital and having a serious infection, Clinton's acute affliction seemed improved by the afternoon when she emerged from the apartment smiling, saying that she was "feeling great," and that it is a "beautiful day in New York."

Pneumonia is apparently dogging the Clinton campaign, afflicting others from her camp.

"I was actually sick for a couple days, I think I had a mild form of it" campaign aide Brian Fallon said on MSNBC. "Everybody from [Campaign Manager] Robby Mook to several of the senior staff have been afflicted with some form of something or other for the last few days. That is not to be unexpected on a presidential campaign."

Pneumonia is a common lung infection that can be caused by bacteria that is spread through coughing, sneezing and breathing, according to the American Lung Association.

"Most healthy people recover from pneumonia in one to three weeks, but pneumonia can be life-threatening," it says on ALA's website. There are many treatments available, and the course of treatment is determined by the cause of the infection, which can be viral, bacterial or fungal.

Massive subway cleanup underway

The rats won't like this.

The MTA's Operation Track Sweep to spiffy up New York's subways commenced Monday and will continue for two weeks.

More than 500 MTA workers are part of the intensive systemwide cleanup to remove trash and debris from the tracks at all of New York City's 469 stations — or 10 miles of subway station track.

During the day workers will clean tracks at outdoor and elevated stations, and signs will be posted at each station with the cleanup schedule.

CREATIVE COMMONS

The heavy-duty cleaning of the underground stations will be done at night when ridership is lower.

MTA Chairman and CEO Thomas Prendergast said that getting rid of trash will reduce the number of track fires which in turn will reduce delays.

"There's no question that a concerted and sustained effort to limit trash on subway tracks will have a significant impact on the efficiency of subway service," Prendergast said.

Veronique Hakim, president of NYC Transit, said the massive cleanup represents a "new way of thinking" about how to improve the subway experience.

"We're approaching this as a sustained effort to get the tracks clean, and keep them as clean as possible over the long haul," she said.

Hakim stresses that it is also the public's duty to dispose of trash properly to keep subways and tracks clean. AMANDA MIKELBERG

Two races to watch in today's primary elections

Seats vacated by state Sen. Adriano Espaillat and Assembly Speaker Sheldon Silver are up for grabs.

GARY KANE
@MetroNewYork
gary.kane@metro.us

New Yorkers go to the polls Tuesday for the state's final primary elections, and two races for state offices will be closely watched.

In Lower Manhattan, six Democrats are vying for the party's nomination to run for the Assembly seat formerly held by speaker Sheldon Silver, convicted on corruption charges late last year.

Alice Cancel won the special election in April to serve the remainder of the former speaker's term. Several of the former speaker's supporters backed Cancel in the election.

She now faces challenges from five other candidates for the seat: Paul Newell, a community activist who ran against Silver in the 2008 primary; former assemblyman aide Yuh-Line Niou, who narrowly lost to Cancel in April; civil rights attorney Jennifer Rajkumar; former community board chairwoman Gigi Li; and businessman Don Lee.

GETTY IMAGES

The district is a Democratic stronghold, so the winner of the primary race is all but certain to be elected in November.

In the other must-watch race, four Democrats are contending for the state Senate seat formerly held by Adriano Espaillat, who won the June primary to succeed Congressman Charles Rangel.

Marisol Alcantara, an activist with the New York State Nurses Association, is Espaillat's choice for the seat and has the backing of the Independent Democratic Conference, which has aligned with senate Republicans.

She faces tough opposition in a field that includes Micah Lasher, a former top aide to Attorney General Eric Schneiderman and former Mayor Michael Bloomberg; former City Council Member Robert Jackson; and community activist Luis Tejada.

Statewide, 65 Senate seats and 150 Assembly seats will be contested in the November elections.

Only registered Democrats and Republicans can vote in Tuesday's primary.

There is no interest paid on balances of $0-$2,499. APYs disclosed effective as of September 6, 2016. APYs may be changed at any time at the Bank's discretion. There is a minimum of $2,500 required to open the Apple Bank BONUS Savings account. $2,500 minimum daily balance is required to avoid $10 monthly maintenance fee. Fees may reduce earnings. Funds used to open this account cannot be from an existing Apple Bank account. Maximum deposit amount is $3,000,000 per household. Special bonus feature: A .25% simple interest rate bonus will be paid on each anniversary date of account opening on the lowest balance for that year (anniversary date to anniversary date). No bonus is paid if the account balance is less than $2,500 on the anniversary date. Additional deposits during a given anniversary period do not affect the bonus interest payment. Deposits made to the account on any anniversary date will be used to calculate the lowest account balance for the next anniversary period. The bonus interest is calculated on the lowest balance on deposit from one anniversary date to the next anniversary date. Simple interest rate bonus is subject to change at any time after first anniversary date of account opening. Hypothetical example of how bonus works: Assume an account is opened on January 12, 2016 for $50,000. A $10,000 withdrawal is made on July 12, 2016. No other withdrawals are made prior to the January 12, 2017 anniversary date. The low balance is now $40,000, so $100 in bonus interest will be paid on January 12, 2017.

Autistic man lost at West Indian Day Parade still missing one week later

The family has plastered posters in Crown Heights.

AMANDA MIKELBERG
@MetroNewYork
letters@metro.us

The search continues for a special-needs Crown Heights man who went missing during last week's West Indian Day Parade.

Leon Shepherd, 50, was last seen by his mother at 4:30 p.m. on Sept. 4, as they were watching the floats during the parade near the intersection of Franklin Avenue and Eastern Parkway. A worker at the Bravo supermarket reported that he might have seen him near the market and entering the A/C subway station on Nostrand Avenue on Tuesday afternoon.

The family has plastered fliers around the neighborhood that describe him as around 5-feet-7, 155 pounds and missing a portion of his right index finger.

He is autistic, and although he can speak and read well he does not know his way around New York and has not gone anywhere without his mother because he arrived from Guyana in early July. He walks quickly and talks to himself, his mother said.

"I don't know the moment when he slipped away, but I turned and realized he wasn't there," said Lena Shepherd. Her frantic search began almost immediately as she ran through the streets, and then called someone at her church to drive around looking for him, to no avail.

"We are all praying for him," said Shepherd. "I cannot explain the feeling, but I am his mother, and sometimes I go off sobbing."

Anyone with information about Leon can confidentially report it using the NYPD's Crime Stoppers website by anonymously calling the Crime Stoppers hotline at 1-800-577-TIPS (8477). Tips can also be text-messed to the NYPD by texting 274637 (CRIMES), then entering TIP577.

NYPD: Muslim woman set on fire in Midtown

A 35-year-old woman wearing traditional Muslim garb was set on fire in Manhattan, police said Monday.

The Scottish tourist was not hurt in the attack which occurred around 9 p.m. Saturday near Valentino, a boutique, on Fifth Avenue and East 55th Street. The woman felt heat on her left arm and was able to douse the flames on her blouse, a spokesperson for NYPD said.

"She saw [the suspect] pull a lighter away and walk away," a source told New York Daily News. "He doesn't say anything."

The suspect got away, but the woman was able to get a look at him before he fled east on 54th Street, police said.

The NYPD Hate Crimes Task Force is determining whether or not the incident, which occurred on the weekend of the 15th anniversary of the 9/11 attacks, was motivated by bias against Muslims.

"I would obviously be concerned because it's symptomatic of the overall rise in Islamophobic sentiment in our society," Ibrahim Hooper, a spokesman for the Council on American-Islamic Relations, told the Daily News. "That's based on the spike across the country in hate crimes and hate incidents, in recent days and over the past year."

On Monday, Valentino security guards told the Daily News the police believe the woman might have been set on fire on another avenue, but came to Fifth Avenue to look for help.

"It's crazy," an employee at Savitt Partners, a real estate agency firm next door, told the Daily News. "It's always crowded around here. Even at nighttime it's busy."

Health Department: West Nile confirmed in New York City

The first human case of West Nile in New York City in 2016 was confirmed on Monday by the Health Department.

The patient, who is a Brooklyn resident, is over the age of 40 and has underlying medical conditions, according to the Health Department. He is the 318th New Yorker to be diagnosed since West Nile was found in the United States in 1999.

"This season's first case of West Nile virus is a reminder to protect ourselves against mosquito bites," said Health Commissioner Dr. Mary T. Bassett. "Wearing mosquito repellent when you are outdoors, getting rid of standing water and installing window screens will reduce your risk of getting bitten. New Yorkers age 60 and older or people with weakened immune systems should be especially careful as they are more likely to become seriously ill, and in rare cases die, if infected."

This first case of West Nile in NYC was identified about two weeks later in the season compared with previous years.

The Health Department has completed nine rounds of pesticide spraying and seven aerial larvicide treatments throughout the five boroughs to reduce the risk of West Nile and Zika viruses, the department said.

To date, no Zika virus has been found in any mosquito in New York City. KIMBERLY M. AQUILINA

Obama would veto bill allowing 9/11 families to sue Saudi Arabia

Under the Constitution, Obama has 10 days to veto the bill before it automatically becomes law. The Constitution also allows a “pocket veto,” in which the president can defeat a bill just by holding onto it until Congress is out of session.

President Barack Obama would veto a bill passed by both houses of Congress that would allow survivors and families of victims of the Sept. 11 attacks to sue the government of Saudi Arabia for damages, White House spokesman Josh Earnest said on Monday.

“It’s not hard to imagine other countries using this law as an excuse to haul U.S. diplomats or U.S. service members or even U.S. companies into courts all around the world,” Earnest told reporters in a daily briefing.

“I do anticipate the president would veto this legislation when it is presented to him,” he said.

The House of Representatives passed the bill by voice vote, without objections, on Friday, after the Senate passed it unanimously in May, clearing the way for it to go to the White House for Obama to sign into law or veto.

Congressional aides said the measure appeared to have enough support, two-thirds majorities in both the Senate and House, for lawmakers to override an Obama veto for the first time since he took office in January 2009.

However, such a vote is unlikely to take place soon. Obama is not expected to get the bill until after Congress leaves Washington. The Senate could leave as soon as this week, and the House next, and lawmakers would not be in Washington again until after the Nov. 8 elections.

BRIEF

Grand jury to probe possible police cover-up in Chicago teen's death

A grand jury will hear evidence of whether Chicago police officers lied to justify the 2014 shooting death of a black teenager by a white officer, local media reported on Monday.

Patricia Brown Holmes, a special prosecutor appointed by Cook County Judge LeRoy Martin Jr. in July, motioned for a grand jury on Monday after looking at preliminary information. She did this so that “people would know there was fairness” in the process, she told Reuters.

Martin accepted the motion and said he would convene a special grand jury to hear evidence, according to the Chicago Tribune. Martin could not be reached for comment.

The October 2014 killing of Laquan McDonald, 17, who was shot 16 times by officer Jason Van Dyke, brought intense national scrutiny of Chicago's police force.

A police video of the shooting released more than a year later made headlines across the country and prompted calls for Mayor Rahm Emanuel to resign. The video footage shows Van Dyke continued to fire after McDonald had fallen to the ground.

Van Dyke is facing charges of first-degree murder and is on unpaid leave. He has pleaded not guilty. REUTERS

Beauty from within

"My secret for young and radiant skin"
- Carmen Electra

Here is Carmen Electra's secret: A tablet that helps reduce wrinkles and maintain a young and beautiful looking skin

SKIN CARE IN A TABLET

Carmen Electra's secret to young and radiant looking skin is a healthy diet and Skin Care Collagen Filler™ tablets, a beauty from within supplement containing astaxanthin, which in studies has been shown to significantly reduce fine lines and face wrinkles*.

BEAUTY FROM WITHIN

When you age your skin's collagen producing cells reduce their collagen production. Your skin becomes more receptive to fine lines and wrinkles and loses its firmness and moisture.

Skin Care Collagen Filler tablets nourish the collagen producing cells in the deep dermal layers of the skin, where traditional anti-aging creams can't reach. That is the benefit of beauty from within.

DO AS CARMEN ELECTRA

Make Skin Care Collagen Filler tablets part of your daily beauty routine today and experience the benefits.

The small easy to take tablets can be recommended to both women and men of all ages. Do not wait till more wrinkles form. Do something good for yourselves.

Skin Care Collagen Filler is available at Walgreens, GNC and Meijer and online. For more information or to purchase online, call 1-887-696-6734 or visit newnordicusa.com.

Israeli charged in NY over alleged kidnapping plot

An Israeli citizen who serves as a divorce mediator within an Orthodox Jewish community in New York has been arrested and charged with conspiring to kidnap a man who had refused to grant his wife a religious divorce.

Binyamin Gottlieb, 33, was arrested by the FBI at John F. Kennedy International Airport on Sunday as he prepared to board a Ukraine-bound flight, four days after charges were announced against an Israeli rabbi and another man over the same alleged scheme.

Those men, Aharon Goldberg, an Israel-based rabbi, and Shimen Liebowitz, a member of Satmar Hasidic community in Kiryas Joel, New York, were accused of conspiring to kidnap and murder the intended victim.

Prosecutors said a source, an Orthodox Jew who provided investigative services, contacted the Federal Bureau of Investigation in July after being recruited by Goldberg and Liebowitz to kidnap a Brooklyn man.

The kidnapping was intended to have the man issue a "get," a document that would grant his wife a religious divorce, prosecutors said.

A criminal complaint said that at a July meeting, they discussed options including a suggestion by Gottlieb to kidnap the man in Ukraine, where he planned to go for the Jewish New Year in late September, and then flying him to Israel.

Authorities said that after that meeting, Gottlieb, an Israeli citizen who lives in Monsey, New York, gave $25,000 in cash to the source as payment.

In later meetings, Goldberg and Liebowitz discussed their desire to kidnap and kill the Brooklyn man, the complaint said.

Jacob Laufer, Gottlieb's lawyer, argued in court on Monday that his client, a self-employed divorce mediator, was at the "periphery" of the case, and should be released on a $2.5 million bond.

But Assistant U.S. Attorney Scott Hartman said Gottlieb was "intimately involved," and that evidence suggested he may have engaged in similar plots involving forced divorces.

"This wasn't Mr. Gottlieb's first rodeo," he said. REUTERS

Berkshire in lawsuit of workers' comp 'siphoning'

The complaint, filed by Breakaway Courier Systems, came as Berkshire's Applied Underwriters unit faces scrutiny over its workers' compensation policies.

Berkshire Hathaway Inc. has been sued by a New York bicycle courier company over an alleged illegal scheme to cheat employers buying workers' compensation policies.

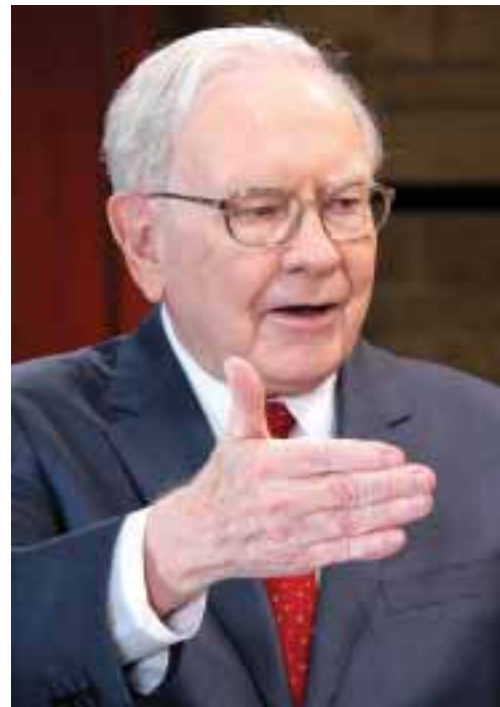

Breakaway, with about 300 employees, accused Berkshire and Applied of "siphoning" premiums through a web of illegal shell companies, with diverted premiums going to unlicensed out-of-state insurers.

The plan amounted to a "reverse Ponzi scheme" in which unsuspecting employers expecting to buy affordable policies instead bought costly "reinsurance" requiring them to cover each other's losses, leaving taxpayers on the hook for shortfalls when too many workers are injured on the job, Breakaway said.

"Breakaway thought it was purchasing a workers' comp policy with a profit-sharing component if its losses were low," Raymond Dowd, its lawyer, said in an interview. "Instead it purchased a complex derivative swap labeled misleadingly as a 'reinsurance participation agreement' that put all the risk on Breakaway.

Warren Buffett, chairman and CEO of Berkshire Hathaway, and consistently ranked among the world's wealthiest people. GETTY IMAGES

"Berkshire's schemes break multiple laws, including that you cannot collect insurance premiums if you are not licensed," Dowd added.

Neither Berkshire nor Applied immediately responded to requests for comment.

The lawsuit, filed in the state supreme court in Manhattan, seeks at least $18 million in damages, plus a declaration that the reinsurance participation agreements are void and against public policy.

It shines a spotlight on a lesser-known part of Berkshire's insurance operations, which also include Geico car insurance and General Re reinsurance.

Berkshire, run by billionaire investor Warren Buffett, has some 90 operating units including the BNSF railroad, Dairy Queen ice cream, and various apparel, energy and industrial companies.

Breakaway sued three days after Applied and its California Insurance Co. affiliate agreed to stop selling disputed workers' compensation policies in California.

Both insurers denied wrongdoing. California Insurance Commissioner Dave Jones said its sale of a policy to Shasta Linen Supply Inc. of Sacramento subjected the employer of 63 to hundreds of thousands of dollars of extra costs.

Similarly, Breakaway's RPA put that company at "imminent financial risk" and was "not understandable" by ordinary purchasers, Martin Schwartzman, former first deputy superintendent of New York's insurance department, said in a filing accompanying the complaint.

Trump International Hotel in Washington, D.C. GETTY IMAGES

Trump opens luxury hotel, just blocks from the White House

Republican U.S. presidential candidate Donald Trump opened the latest outpost in his real estate empire on Monday, a luxury hotel in a historic building five blocks from the White House that underwent a two-year, $200 million renovation.

While staff at the 263-room Trump International Hotel planned little hoopla for what they described as a “soft opening,” about a dozen protesters opposed to the New York real estate developer’s presidential run gathered outside. The opening comes eight weeks before the Nov. 8 election.

“It kind of fits his personality that he finds a way to be on Pennsylvania Avenue, one way or another,” said protester Judy Byron, 70, a Washington artist.

The hotel with a $20,000-a-night suite is at 1100 Pennsylvania Ave. and the White House is further along the street at number 1600. The hotel is housed in Washington’s third-tallest building, the 1899 Old Post Office, built in the Romanesque Revival architectural style.

The protesters criticized some of Trump’s positions, including a promise to build a wall along the Mexican border to block illegal immigrants. Protest organizer Andrew Castro of Baltimore said, “We’re out here building a wall against racism.”

Trump’s daughter Ivanka, who helped negotiate the 60-year lease with the U.S. government and oversaw the building’s revamp and design, said the project had come in a year ahead of schedule and under budget.

“We have really positioned this hotel to not only be the finest hotel in D.C. (District of Columbia) but in the country,” she said in a telephone interview.

Her father said on Twitter that he had stopped by the property “to thank all of the tremendous men & women for their hard work!”

The first guests at the hotel, which fronts the presidential inauguration parade route, were set to check in on Monday. A grand-opening ceremony is planned for next month.

Trump attended the 2014 groundbreaking for the renovations alongside local Democratic officials before launching his presidential campaign last year. Rooms start at $396 a night, with suites starting at $556, according to the hotel’s website.

While Trump’s name is hard to escape in his native New York, where it adorns structures including the Trump Tower as well as a Bronx golf course, the hotel marks his most visible presence in Washington.

His comments describing some Mexican immigrants as criminals prompted celebrity chefs Jose Andres and Geoffrey Zakarian to pull out of the project. Trump has sued them. REUTERS

BRIEF

Congresswoman urges Labor Department to probe Chipotle over wage theft allegations

A U.S. congresswoman urged the Labor Department to investigate Chipotle Mexican Grill for possible wage theft, another potential hurdle for chain as it seeks to rebound from food-safety problems.

U.S. Representative Rosa DeLauro, a Democrat from Connecticut, said the department should probe allegations from about 10,000 current and former Chipotle employees who have joined a federal lawsuit that alleges the company did not properly pay them for hours worked.

Such actions, if true, would contradict federal law, DeLauro said in a letter to the department, “depriving workers of the wages and earnings to which they are legally entitled.”

Chipotle said her call for an investigation was “misdirected.” “We have maintained from the outset that this case is without merit and will vigorously defend our employment practices,” company spokesman Chris Arnold said.

The Labor Department had no immediate comment.

Chipotle has been working to revive sales growth after outbreaks of E. coli, norovirus and salmonella linked to its restaurants sickened more than 500 people last year and drove away customers.

Last week, activist investor William Ackman disclosed that his hedge fund had purchased a 9.9 percent stake in the company, saying it was undervalued.

The case over unpaid wages began two years ago when Leah Turner, who worked as a manager at a Chipotle restaurant in Colorado, alleged in a lawsuit that the company routinely required hourly paid employees to work “off the clock,” according to court records. REUTERS

Clinton campaign says it could have better handled health scare

Hillary Clinton's presidential campaign acknowledged on Monday that it mishandled a health scare for the Democratic candidate and promised to release additional medical details in the coming days, a pledge Republican rival Donald Trump made as well.

Clinton, 68, canceled a trip to California to recuperate from pneumonia, but her campaign drew criticism for waiting two days to reveal that diagnosis, a move that reinforced concerns about what critics view as a tendency toward secrecy.

"I think that in retrospect, we could have handled it better in terms of providing more information more quickly," Clinton spokesman Brian Fallon told MSNBC.

He said the campaign was too focused on making sure Clinton was well instead of releasing information during the 90 minutes following the release of a video showing her nearly collapsing after attending a memorial in New York for the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks.

The campaign said initially that Clinton was suffering from the heat.

"In those 90 minutes, we were putting a priority on making sure she was OK," Fallon said. Clinton received the diagnosis on Friday. Her campaign announced it on Sunday.

Trump, 70, has been suggesting for weeks that Clinton lacks the energy needed to be president. He has raised questions about her stamina, mirroring a strategy used during the Republican primary campaign when he derided rival Jeb Bush as a "low-energy" candidate.

Clinton flew nearly a million miles as secretary of state under President Barack Obama and has kept up a heavy travel schedule as a presidential candidate. Democrats said her continued attendance at events despite her diagnosis proved her toughness. REUTERS

West Virginia man avoids prison in hoax to blow up Statue of Liberty

The Statue of Liberty stands in the foreground as Lower Manhattan is viewed at dusk. GETTY IMAGES

Jason Smith, 43, was spared prison but sentenced to three years supervised release by U.S. District Judge Vernon Broderick in Manhattan, who cited among other reasons Smith's need for mental health treatment.

A West Virginia man was sentenced on Monday to time served after he pleaded guilty to making a hoax threat to blow up the Statue of Liberty in New York Harbor last year that led to the evacuation of 3,200 people.

Smith faced up to five years in prison after pleading guilty in June to one count of conveying false and misleading information and hoaxes.

The judge said Smith, who is deaf, had gone for years without treatment for mental health issues, and was now obtaining treatment that could be derailed by his imprisonment.

"For me, the issue is the protection of society and what would be the best way to achieve that," Broderick said at the sentencing hearing.

Prosecutors said that Smith in April 2015 used an iPad application that provides communication services to the hearing impaired to call New York City's emergency 911 system.

On the call, Smith identified himself as a "terrorist" named Abdul Yasin and said "we" were planning to "blow up" the Statue of Liberty, prosecutors said.

Authorities suspect a fugitive named Abdul Rahman Yasin participated in the 1993 bombing of the World Trade Center in Manhattan by Islamist militants.

The bomb scare caused by Smith lasted about four hours.

Smith was arrested in Texas in August 2015 and was released about three weeks later. He has been living in a homeless shelter in New York while awaiting sentencing and was expected to remain in the city.

Jeff Bezos unveils new rocket to compete with SpaceX

Bezos' Kent, Washington-based Blue Origin space company is designing two versions of the rocket, named New Glenn, a nod to John Glenn, the first American to orbit Earth and the last surviving member of NASA's original Mercury 7 astronauts.

Jeff Bezos on Monday unveiled a heavy-lift reusable rocket expected to compete against Elon Musk's SpaceX and other companies for commercial satellite launches before the end of the decade.

"New Glenn is designed to launch commercial satellites and to fly humans into space," Bezos, also the founder and chief executive of Amazon.com Inc., said in a statement emailed to Reuters on Monday.

Both versions of New Glenn will use a first stage powered by seven methane-burning BE-4 engines. The company is building a launch site and test facility at Cape Canaveral Air Force Station in Florida, and a rocket manufacturing plant at NASA's adjacent Kennedy Space Center.

Blue Origin also intends to sell the BE-4 to United Launch Alliance for its new Vulcan rocket. ULA is a partnership of Lockheed Martin Corp. and Boeing Co.

Blue Origin intends to fly New Glenn's first stage back to a landing pad so it can be refurbished and reflown, an approach that fellow tech billionaire entrepreneur Musk is taking with his Falcon rockets. SpaceX so far has successfully landed rockets six times, twice on the ground and four times on a platform floating in the ocean.

SpaceX had expected to try a seventh landing on Sept. 3, but its rocket was destroyed during a routine prelaunch test two days before liftoff from Cape Canaveral Air Force Station.

The cause of the accident, which destroyed a $200 million Space Communication Ltd. satellite, is under investigation.

Blue Origin has been testing a smaller, reusable rocket and spaceship called New Shepard, which is intended to fly paying passengers to an altitude of about 62 miles so they can experience a few minutes of microgravity and see the limb of Earth set against the blackness of space.

Blue Origin has not yet started selling tickets for rides. If test flights continue as expected, Blue Origin pilots could begin flying next year, with paying passengers to follow in 2018, Bezos told Reuters during an interview earlier this year. REUTERS

Take The Foot Health Checkup

- My toenails are streaked, discolored and thickened.
- The sides of my toenails dig into the skin and hurt.
- I have a large bump behind my big toe (or little toe) which is always red.
- I get an extremely painful "cramp" in the area of my third and fourth toes when wearing shoes.
- My toes aren't straight- they are all cocked-up, bent and hurt.
- I have painful calluses on the ball of my foot which keep building up.
- I have corns on my toes which get thick no matter what shoe size I wear.
- The bottom of my heel hurts all day, but it's worse when I step out of bed in the morning.
- I have cramps in my legs which always happen when I walk the same distance.
- My ankles are swollen most of the time.
- My feet are always dry and scaly - sometimes they itch.
- My feet just hurt all over when I stand or walk a lot.
- I have numbness, burning, infection, persistent pain, skin rash, or open sores.

Tesla's Musk says new Autopilot likely would have prevented death

Tesla Motors Co. chief executive Elon Musk said on Sunday the automaker was updating its semi-autonomous driving system Autopilot with new limits on hands-off driving and other improvements that likely would have prevented a fatality in May.

Musk said the update, which will be available within a week or two through an "over-the-air" software update, would rely foremost on radar to give Tesla's electric luxury cars a better sense of what is around them and when to brake.

New restrictions of Autopilot 8.0 are a nod to widespread concerns that the system lulled users into a false sense of security through its "hands-off" driving capability. The updated system now will temporarily prevent drivers from using the system if they do not respond to audible warnings to take back control of the car.

"We're making much more effective use of radar," Musk told journalists on a phone call. "It will be a dramatic improvement in the safety of the system done entirely through software."

Tesla's Autopilot, introduced in October, has been the focus of intense scrutiny since it was revealed in July that a Tesla Model S driver, Joshua Brown, was killed while using the technology in a May 7 collision with a truck in Florida.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration has been investigating Tesla's Autopilot system since June because of the fatal accident. The agency had been briefed on the changes by Tesla and would review them, spokesman Bryan Thomas said. He declined to offer an update on the Tesla investigation.

Musk said it was "very likely" the improved Autopilot would have prevented the death of Brown, whose car sped into the trailer of a truck crossing a highway, but he cautioned that the update "doesn't mean perfect safety." REUTERS

After a musical hiatus following the success of 2013's "Artpop," Lady Gaga is now opening up about the emotional distress triggered by her rise to fame.

"I needed a moment to stabilize," she told The Daily Mirror. "When my career took off, I don't remember anything at all. It's like I'm traumatized. I needed time to recalibrate my soul." The star has since been extremely public about her battle with depression and anxiety, which has prompted her to begin putting herself first: "I definitely look after my well-being," Gaga explained.

After releasing her single "Perfect Illusion" last week — a small taste from her soon-to-come album — the singer is beginning to feel "good" about the direction of her life. Even better, she's excited to be putting her 20s behind her and is ready to embrace her 30s, which have presented fleeting moments of calmness.

"I find in my 30s, I haven't actually calmed down. I calm down for periods of time and then I'm actually worse — I'm more wild for a short period of time. It's a little bit of both. But 30 is fantastic because I feel like I have all the wisdom of my 20s."

Miley Cyrus is done with red carpets and publicists

PR reps are typically indispensable to the celebs that employ them. But Miley Cyrus isn't like most celebrities.

After years of being stuck in the Hollywood system, the 23-year-old told Elle that she's had enough, and has not employed a publicist since last year. She's also given up red-carpet appearances, noting in the same interview: "Why, when people are starving, am I on a carpet that's red? Because I'm 'important'? Because I'm 'famous'? That's not the word

how I roll. It's like a skit—it's like 'Zoolander.'"

These days, Cyrus says she uses her own social-media channels and enjoys a direct relationship with her fans. The DIY movement has a new champion in Miley, but after Scott Disick's Instagram faux faux back in May, some should probably stick with the professionals.

We all know New York Fashion Week isn't just reserved for the models on the runways. For two weeks out of the year, everyday New Yorkers — at least some of them — get inspired to freshen up their look, whether it's to get into the spirit of the event or just to temper the feeling of inadequacy that results from being around too many professionally good-looking people.

But fret not! LinkNYC, which provides free public Wi-Fi and charging stations throughout the city — and which, you may have read, has also inadvertently provided porn-watching hubs for the homeless — is here to give the everymen and women of New York a chance to be fashion stars.

Through the end of Fashion Week (which rounds out tomorrow, Wednesday, Sept. 15), if you upload a pic of your naturally stylin' self on Instagram and tag #link-runway, you could be featured on LinkNYC's 650-plus digital display screens across Manhattan, Queens and the Bronx. Not quite a billboard, but, hey, a chance to strut your stuff on hundreds of 55-inch screens on street corners all over New York town? Well, we all have to start somewhere.

Check out LinkNYC's Instagram to spy some of the style-savvy New Yorkers who have been selected so far, and check LinkNYC to locate the participating link stations where you can peer the next rising style star. (It could be you!) Fashion aside, it's good to know their locations anyway, in case you need to charge your phone in a pinch or can't wait until you get home to watch "Narcos" (Jk on that last one).

Now, what are you waiting for? Go get dressed and camera — er — iPhone-ready: This could be your big break.

Laurie Davis Edwards is the founder of eFlirt, an online dating concierge service, and the best-selling author of "Love @ First Click: The Ultimate Guide to Online Dating."

"What do I do if I like two guys?" my client asked. "How will I decide?"

For her, this is a hypothetical question — she's dating many

There are two important questions you should ask yourself before getting into a long-term relationship. ISTOCK men but still in the early stages with all of them. But it's a question I hear more and more from singles: In a world where everyone is dating multiple people, how do you decide?

Each relationship is different, but something I consistently notice is people try to think their way to the answer. They compare matches. It happens because when choosing between any two things in life, we're taught to consider pros and cons, and rely on logic. But love isn't rational. To decide, you need to listen to your heart. What matters more than thinking is feeling.

Comparing is natural, but not fair. Each relationship and dynamic is unique. If the other person didn't exist, would you commit? Focus on your emotions with each person separately to decide.

Here are two questions to draw out your feelings that have helped my clients:

1. How does this person make you feel?

Our feelings about someone are the most real and raw when we're with them, so ask yourself this at the end of your next date. What you find may surprise you. One of my clients thought she liked a guy because he pushed her in a good way, but realized he made her feel uncomfortable and pressured when she asked herself this.

2. Is there something here that can grow?

If you're trying to decide, it means you're looking for a long-term relationship, which means the capacity for growth between you two is important. Another client was having amazing sex with the woman he was seeing, but was unsure about their relationship potential when asked this. He's begun asking her more personal questions to see if depth in their relationship is possible.

Liking two people enough to delete your dating profile may seem like a good problem to have — and it is! But remember that while choosing can be empowering, your match has to come to the same conclusion on his or her own, too.

What's Mara Wilson doing now?

She gets asked a lot, so she wrote a book on it.

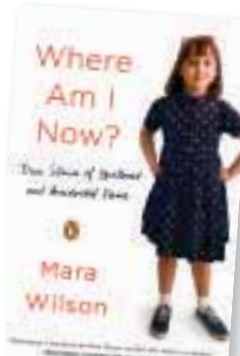

RACHEL RACZKA
@rachelraczka
rachel.raczka@metro.us

If you're a millennial, it's likely that "Matilda," "Mrs. Doubtfire" and "Miracle on 34th Street" were in heavy rotation during your childhood. This also means Mara Wilson, the little girl with brown bangs and a slight lisp, still holds a special little piece of your heart.

Those memories are fond, but Wilson, now 29, has since distanced herself from her childhood career — penning a 2012 blog post that detailed her decision to quit acting — and instead now lends her name to bylines in the likes of McSweeney's, The New York Times and The Toast (RIP). Her quick wit, humor and thoughtfulness have earned her more than 300,000 followers on Twitter, where she continues to answer the perpetual question: "What are you doing now?"

In fact, it's the title of her new book, "Where Am I Now? True Stories of Girlhood and Accidental Fame," out today from Penguin. The NYU grad's intimate collection of essays describe her years on set, the pressures of a post-pubescent Hollywood and the pangs of growing up that affect us all — child star or not. Wilson chats about her decision to pen a memoir, the late Robin Williams and what it's like to date when everyone's still a "Matilda" fan.

How did the idea to write a book of essays all come together?

I always wanted to write a book. Even as a child, I told people I wanted to be an author when I grew up. I thought acting was my thing for a while, and I devoted all my time and energy to it, but I was always writing whenever I could — writing my blog, or doing essays. I had so many things I wanted to write about, but it was Cracked.com that asked me to do a list on child stars and I thought I could be more interested in doing something like that.

In the book, you go into depth about when you were diagnosed with OCD when you were younger and the concern of what the press would say. Why was that important to include in the book?

It was important to me. I wish more celebrities would speak out on having it. I remember when I was diagnosed, looking up [online] and seeing who else had it too. You get one interview with Cameron Diaz saying she's afraid of germs that was blown up to her having OCD. She later said she didn't have a disorder. It's misunderstood and mischaracterized, and I don't think it's usually explained very well. I think Maria Bramford talking about her OCD was great. More people need to do that. I have a platform, and I have a fan base. I'm not world famous, but I think it could help [other people] if I speak out, too.

Do you feel people expect child stars to fail or be troubled?

We're an easy and acceptable target; being a child actor sets up this perfect storm. You have people telling them they're great over and over again, and people doing things for them without their learning to do things themselves, and deal to me, but I would never date a fan. That would be so unfair to them — to have to deal with me, instead of this idealized version of a muse figure.

There's a part of the book that's dedicated to your relationship with Robin Williams, both during "Mrs. Doubtfire" and later in life. Was the decision to include him in his own separate way important to you?

I felt like it was something that had to be said. I wanted to pay tribute to him and I had some fun memories of him that didn't really fit anywhere else in the book. It felt fitting to give him his own chapter because Robin was one of the first people I worked with who was so wonderful. Sally Field and the DeVitos were incredible, too, but it just felt appropriate.

You made a guest spot on "Broad City," which had some fans' hopes up that you would start acting again — was that a one-off?

It's a one-off. In the New York comedy world, everyone's been on "Broad City." I was at a party the other night and someone was like, "Oh, I'm on 'Broad City' this week," and I said, "Oh, I'm on it next week," and someone else said, "I was on it last week." [Laughs] I love the show and the people who work on it are amazing — but when people ask about [my going back into] acting, I'm like, "Um, no. I was playing Waitress No. 2."

Mara Wilson and Robin Williams
20TH CENTURY FOX

getting rewarded for how you look, which inevitably changes. It's a perfect storm of things that can go wrong and damage a person.

There's a funny bit in the book about being worried that your OKCupid profile will get put on blast on Gawker.

I've definitely had people — guys mostly — come up to me say, "I had a crush on you when I was a child," and I'm like, "Well, OK, that feels uncomfortable to me." I usually tend to stay away from that. My first serious boyfriend had never seen "Matilda" and I think at that time, it was good. Now it's not as big of a

Meet all of your Dessert Goals on fall's sweetest day

Don't miss out on tickets for NYC's first-ever dessert festival.

@thisiskis

No need to save room for dessert — at Dessert Goals, every bite will be the sweetest part of the meal.

The first-ever festival devoted to sugar and spice and everything ice cream is coming to turn Dobbin St (64 Dobbin St., Williamsburg) into a sugary paradise on Oct. 23. Word to the sugar-seeking wise though — with demand for dessert-themed events still white hot after the Museum of Ice Cream's limited run, you'll want to get in on this early.

The event doesn't go down until next month, but almost 35,000 people have already said they're going or interested on the event's Facebook page. Lock down tickets as soon as they go on sale, which will be today at noon. And it pays to get in first: Early bird tickets are just $10 at dessertgoals.com.

Get Wowfuls' Hong Kong-style waffle ice creams at Dessert Goals PROVIDED

So what does that golden ticket get you? About 20 vendors from all five boroughs will come together for the all-dessert party, from the San Francisco-born Boba Guys to the bite-size artworks that are Mini Melanie's truffles and, the frozen hit of the summer, Wowfuls' Hong Kong-style waffle ice cream "cones." Each dessert maestro is not only bringing their own goodies — several of them will be collaborating on special treats just for the festival.

How about a way to burn off the sugar rush that comes with six hours (noon-6 p.m.) of tastings? Dessert Goals will also have a special photo garden decorated to complement your treats, plus demonstrations, workshops (including private classes) and a free candy shop to keep the buzz going all the way home.

The spring runways get bold

TINA CHADHA

Proenza Schouler

Forget boring prints. Jack McCollough and Lazaro Hernandez wowed us with a collection of bold geometrics (stripes, triangles and checks) in striking primary colors, with sculptural silhouettes and feather trims. It sounds like a lot, but the mashed-together looks read chic and futuristic. Our only issue: The cool knits with cut-outs seem like they'd be hard to pull off for anyone who's not model size.

Prabal Gurung

Prabal Gurung just convinced us to wear sweaters in spring. The designer featured gauzy knits draped off the shoulder with flowing asymmetrical silk skirts. Inspired by Gloria Steinem and the upcoming election, many of his looks featured words from speeches by famous women. But it was his closing numbers — striking silk gowns in jewel tones; dramatic dresses with slits up to there and pleated sleeves; and a chic black-and-white pantsuit — that spoke the loudest.

Altuzarra

Be still our beating hearts: Joseph Altuzarra sent an organza gown covered in whimsical pineapples down the runway. The designer had fun with prints: Sweet cherries, playful lemons and sexy snakeskin all made appearances on his feminine looks. But his confident #boss lady silhouettes — cinched waists, deep V-necks, and curve-hugging skirts — keep these flirty pieces from appearing too precious.

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

DVF

For Jonathan Saunders' debut collection for Diane von Furstenberg, he mixed it up — literally: A flirty dress for example, featured moody florals on one half and dots on the other; half of the bodice of a silky toffee-colored romper was done in bold black-and-white stripes. The designer also played with asymmetrical shapes, giving the collection a modern, hip feel.

Smoking weed makes you lazy

Canadian scientists confirm marijuana smokers are less willing to perform more difficult tasks.

DMITRY BELYAEV
Metro World News
letters@metro.us

It's long been suspected that smoking pot makes you lazy, and now science has proved it.

Researchers from the University of British Columbia in Canada gave the chemical tetrahydrocannabinol (THC), the main brain-affecting ingredient in cannabis, to laboratory rats. Investigators trained 29 rats to choose between an easy or difficult challenge to earn sugary treats.

"Perhaps unsurprisingly, we found that when we gave THC to these rats, they basically became "cognitively lazy," said Mason Silveira, the study's lead author. "What's interesting, however, is that their ability to do the difficult challenge was unaffected by THC. The rats could still do the task — they just didn't want to."

At the beginning, rats chose between two levers to signal whether they wanted an easy or hard challenge. Choosing the easy challenge resulted in a light turning on for one second, which the rats could easily detect and respond to by poking it with their nose, receiving one sugar pellet as a reward. In the more difficult challenge, the light turned on for only 0.2 seconds, rewarding the rat with two sugar pellets if they responded with a nose poke.

"Under normal circumstances, most rats preferred the harder challenge to earn a bigger reward. But when the rats were given THC, they switched to an easier option, despite earning a smaller reward," explained Silveira.

In further experiments, investigators were able to link this behavioral effect to a specific region of the brain. "We hope to directly administer a THC-like drug into that region and see if we can recreate the decision-making impairment we observed," Silveira added. "Being able to localize this effect to a certain brain region, or network, provides us with an opportunity to try and selectively block it."

In the future, investigators will give THC to rats for an extended period of time, to see how it affects decision-making processes in the long-term, because some people tend to use cannabis chronically and this can have different effects on the brain and behavior. "While cannabis helps a lot of people, there are certain effects that they may want to be wary of before they take it. With cannabis-law reform imminent in many countries, it is imperative that more research is devoted to the topic," said Silveira. "I really hope governments make it easier for labs to conduct human cannabis studies, because that will be the best way to inform future policy."

Darrelle Revis, right, had a brutal time sticking with A.J. Green on Sunday. GETTY IMAGES

THE GOOD, THE OLD, AND THE UGLY

BURKE
@burke_metro

The Jets and the Giants entered this season with extremely similar expectations. They both were expected to make the playoffs.

Sunday's nip and tuck games — a Jets' 23-22 loss at home to the Bengals and a 20-19 Giants win in Texas — did nothing to erase those expectations. In fact, you could easily make the case that the Jets' home loss to Cincinnati was more impressive than the Giants' win over a questionable Cowboys team.

Anytime you win or lose by just one point, luck obviously plays a big factor. Luck will also play an enormous role for both the Jets and Giants this season as both teams will be relying on players who are long in the tooth.

Darrelle Revis looked every one of his 31 years on Sunday as he was burned to a crisp by Cincinnati's A.J. Green. Now, Green is arguably the top wide receiver in football — but Revis' job is to shutdown or at least contain the best wide receivers in the game. He did neither on Sunday, and suddenly that five-year, $70 million contract he signed last year is an embarrassment.

Revis could very well rebound — he's started off slow before — but Sunday's performance was cause for legit alarm.

On the flip side, the Jets' other superstar player who desperately wishes it was 2010 — Matt Forte — was brilliant for New York on Sunday. He ran the ball 22 times for 96 yards, and caught five passes for 59 yards. All told, Forte accounted for 45 percent of the Jets' yards against Cincinnati.

Both Revis and Forte have tall tasks for older players on Thursday as they and the Jets will face the Bills in Orchard Park on a short week (Thursday, 8:25 p.m., CBS).

Cruzin' along

Everyone had to have felt great for Victor Cruz on Sunday as he grabbed the game-winning touchdown against Dallas. Cruz, of course, hasn't played a full NFL season since 2012 due to major leg injuries and finally got back in the end zone against rival Dallas.

Cruz was mighty efficient against the Cowboys as he was targeted four times by Eli Manning and caught all four of the passes thrown his way.

Rookie receiver Sterling Shepard was also targeted four times by Manning and finished with three grabs, including a touchdown.

Odell Beckham Jr. was targeted eight times by Manning and finished with four catches for 73 yards.

The Giants now shift their focus to Week 2, as they will host the Saints on Sunday at MetLife (1 p.m., Fox).

Tecmo Bowl commercial

During the first Sunday of NFL Week 1 each year, we get a strong taste of what will become the most annoying part of our fall and winter.

Nationwide's "Chicken Parm You Taste so Good" and DraftKings' "Trust Your Uncle Vito if You Want" were the annoying kings of 2015 (DraftKings ran back Uncle Vito this year — a sure sign that they're scaling back commercial spending), but 2016 has yet to crown an annoying commercial champ.

It's possible that we haven't found an annoying champ yet because of the goodwill that Kia threw at us on Sunday with that Bo Jackson Tecmo Bowl commercial. They say that smells spark the greatest amount of nostalgia in humans, but "they" apparently never grew up playing Nintendo games.

Side note: I have great nostalgia for NES' DuckTales video game, mostly because I'm the greatest DuckTales gamer of all time. I walked into a college party at 3 a.m. in the early 2000s, a good 12 years after I had last played DuckTales, and left 10-12 UConn stoners in shock because of how dominant I was hopping around on Scrooge McDuck's cane.

I still maintain I want "The Moon Theme" from the DuckTales the video game played at my funeral. It is the saddest song ever created.

MLB power rankings | by Ryan Hannable

No. 1

Cubs (91-51)

The Cubs will enter the postseason as World Series favorites as they continue to dominate the rest of baseball. As everyone knows, the playoffs are about pitching and the Cubs have that with two of the three pitchers in NL ERA — Kyle Hendricks and Jon Lester.

No. 2

Nats (85-58)

Washington is one of the hottest teams in baseball as it has won seven of 10. Max Scherzer now has a 2.78 ERA.

No. 3

Rangers (85-59)

The Rangers have all but clinched the AL West. The moves they made at the trade deadline have certainly paid off in the second half.

No. 4

Indians (83-59)

Cleveland is playing well at the right time and can only hope it will carry into the postseason as it has won seven of its last 10.

No. 5

Dodgers (80-62)

The NL West title will likely come down to the final week of the regular season. Corey Seager's 5.9 WAR is second in the NL.

No. 6

Red Sox (80-62)

The biggest difference for the Red Sox right now is their bullpen as they have not allowed an earned run in the month of September.

No. 7

Blue Jays (78-64)

Toronto is led by Edwin Encarnacion's 39 homers and 115 RBIs, second and first in the AL. But can they get key pitching down the stretch?

No. 8

Orioles (78-64)

Mark Trumbo has 41 home runs, but the O's won't be going anywhere unless their rotation can step it up.

No. 10

Yankees (76-66)

The Yankees improbably still have a 13 percent chance of making the postseason. The youth movement is already paying off.

No. 12

Mets (76-67)

The Mets have won seven of 10. Noah Syndergaard continues to dominate as he has a 2.48 ERA, second best in the NL.

Hip Arthritis Pain? Can Newest Medical Treatments Help Avoid Surgery?

If you suffer with painful hip arthritis and want medical options to surgery — science may have finally found the possible solution you've been looking for.

Here is why: Arthritis develops from failure of internal cells of the joint to produce Synovial Fluid which cushions the joint. Then, wear-and-tear over time can cause the joint to "dry out" and grind down the protective cartilage leading to pain, inflammation and immobility. Let it go too long and your only option may be complete surgical replacement of the hip.

But...researchers and doctors have discovered all-natural gel like medicines that are like "joint oil" and can be used to supplement the joint which is drying out... much like adding oil to an automobile. This all-natural gel is quite similar to the naturally occurring lubricating substances in the hip joint. When doctors precisely place this lubricating gel into your hip joint — always with the use of a advanced medical imaging - it is like putting oil on a rusty door hinge. It cushions the joint and can decrease pain and promote healing. This is not cortisone and has no side effects. For some, results can be dramatic and last for months - if not longer. The earlier you treat the hip, the better chance it can help you.

Know this: This is NOT a supplement you can buy over the counter or on the internet. This is a REAL medical treatment that must be given by a health care professional with advanced medical technology only.

And the great news is: You can find out if you are a candidate for this advanced medical procedure with our No-Obligation Risk-Free Hip Pain Screening at Downtown NYC Medical. To find out more and schedule your free screening appointment, simply call 800-879-7343

YOU CAN'T BLAME METS FOR TRYING TO CASH IN ON TEBOW

OPINION

MARC MALUSIS
@marcmalusis

Give the Mets credit, they see a way to make money off of Tim Tebow.

He is certainly a polarizing sports figure, the likes of which we have not seen in quite some time. Maybe it is his college success at Florida or his faith or college celibacy or his brief NFL success. Maybe it is a combination of all of these things that lead some people to be angry at the thought of Tim Tebow signing a minor league contract with the Mets. There are his followers, the disciples of Tim Tebow, who feel he is a special individual and will always support him through thick and thin.

I have no issue with Tebow. Follow your dreams and do what makes you happy because we all know you can't make everyone happy in life.

With that being said, Tebow is a marketing agent's dream. He sells. Right now, you can pop on his website and buy a signed bat for $175 and a signed baseball at $125. He knows how to take advantage of every single opportunity to sell himself.

The Mets were reportedly one of 10 teams that offered the Heisman Trophy winner a contract, but they were the only team that was willing to allow Tebow to continue his TV work for the SEC Network, while he chases his dream to become a player in the major leagues.

So we have learned that

Is there any real chance Tim Tebow plays well enough to get to Citi Field? GETTY IMAGES

Tebow is not willing to go all in and bet on himself that as a 29-year-old he will develop quickly enough to become a major leaguer. He is still leaving the TV avenue open. Good for him.

On the conference call on Thursday morning, Mets GM Sandy Alderson said, "While I and [the] organization are mindful of the novel nature of this situation, this decision was strictly driven by baseball. It is not driven by marketing considerations or anything sort."

So baseball clubs are in the business of developing 29-year-old former football players who has not played competitive baseball since high-school?

Don't insult our intelligence as sports fans in this city. The Tebow signing is what it is. The Mets, along with other teams in major league baseball, were "intrigued" about profiting off of his popularity. He sells tickets. He brings people out to the ballpark. Tebow is a drawing card and that can't be forgotten about or dismissed.

He will sell jerseys and tickets in the minor leagues. Just imagine if he ever played in Brooklyn for the Cyclones. The coverage of Tebow playing in Brooklyn would be off the charts. How about the crowds he will draw and the attention he will get down in spring training in Port St. Lucie.

To say that it is anything else other than what we all see it to be is an insult. When Alderson said this is a "classic player development opportunity," I chuckled because there is nothing classic about Tim Tebow the baseball player and there is nothing classic about his age.

I am sure the Mets farmhands will benefit from having the presence of Tebow around the organization. He is a good guy that has lived a full and fruitful life and I am sure his life experiences on the field and off will be of great benefit to his teammates in the instructional league. He is a leader and a hard worker and will give great effort in the journey ahead. There is a lot of reasons why an organization associated with Tim Tebow can benefit from his intangibles.

However, intangibles only take you so far and we saw that in the NFL as Tebow ultimately showed he was not good enough to consistently succeed as a NFL quarterback. Alderson will continue to defend this decision as a pure baseball decision, but he needs to understand the skepticism about that statement in this market.

After all, Alderson was skeptical on Aug. 9 when he was asked about if the Mets would be interested in Tebow before his showcase in California. Alderson paused and grinned and answered, "Are you insinuating we need a Hail Mary at this point? That's not something we've given a lot of thought to. I'd say it's probably unlikely, but that's without any real information on his baseball background. So we'll keep an open mind."

They kept their mind open and liked the total package that Tebow represents and wanted to bring him into the organization.

There was nothing "pure" about this baseball decision.

Aries Getting involved in something you believe in or helping someone you love will bring you satisfaction and promote better relationships.

Taurus Count on others only if you want to be disappointed. You have more than enough knowledge and skills to do what needs to be done on your own.

Gemini A chance to make extra cash while doing something you enjoy looks promising. Don't let a needy person deny you the chance to take advantage of an opportunity.

Cancer Think matters through and be sure to do things for the right reasons. It's time to put what you want first and stop letting others control your life. Be persistent and persuasive.

Leo Educational pursuits, an apprenticeship or an educational endeavor will bring about positive vocational changes that can raise your profile and income.

Virgo Make an effort to update your image or improve your domestic environment. A networking event will give you a platform to present what you have to offer.

Libra Make plans to do things with children or to get together with friends or family. Interacting with people will help you sort through any differences you may have.

Scorpio Emotionally fraught matters will escalate if you aren't willing to listen to others' suggestions. Don't let uncertainty and confusion weigh you down.

Sagittarius Look at the big picture and weigh what's doable and what isn't before you commit to someone's demands. Empty promises and exploitative behavior are prevalent.

Capricorn Take more time to spend with people who understand your vision. Backup will be necessary if you want to bring about change that is not wanted by everyone.

Aquarius You will make headway financially, legally and personally if you take action and make things happen. An opportunistic venture should not be ignored.

Pisces Learn as you go. Set realistic expectations that won't draw interference from someone making demands or trying to control you. EUGENIA LAST
